Write a function that takes two arrays representing strings and swaps the last character in the two strings. For example, if called with cat and book it should change them to cak and boot. If either string is empty, then the function should do nothing.

```c
void swapEnd( char A[], char B[])
{
```